NSW BUDGET BRINGS MORE WEEKLY BUSES TO THE HILLS

More than 2,000 extra weekly bus services will be rolled out across NSW in the next 12 months, with customers living Western Sydney one of the big beneficiaries.

Premier Gladys Berejiklian, Treasurer Dominic Perrottet and Minister for Transport and Infrastructure Andrew Constance today confirmed the increased services will be part of the $1.5 billion investment for bus services throughout New South Wales, including regional and metropolitan bus services, school services and financing of new and replacement buses to cater for New South Wales services.

“This Government is building a better public transport network having delivered more than 30,000 additional weekly transport services across the state since 2011,” said Ms Berejiklian said.

NSW Treasurer Dominic Perrottet said: “It is the NSW Government’s good economic management which is allowing us to provide people across the State with the services they need and deserve.”

Minister for Transport and Infrastructure Andrew Constance said the Government was focussed on delivering improved public transport services were people need it the most.

“We have invested record amounts into improving and creating more and more public transport options for people right across Sydney and NSW,” Mr Constance said.

Member for Castle Hill Ray Williams MP said this was great news for the residents of The Hills Shire.
